Available on April 14, 2023

NEW YORK – December 27, 2022 – “A Sovereign Pursuit: Stolen Justice Redeemed,” an intense urban love story and science fiction adventure that explores a heroic pursuit to rescue young female Martians from sex trafficking and modern-day exploitation of Mars, is being published on February 14.

The self-published novel by Mya A. Chavis is about a Martian/extraterrestrial living in a nation called Plaxar, which is essentially the planet Mars. The main character Roscoe is an orphan with a stuttering condition who had a horrible childhood. He has since found love and family and is happily married with two kids.

He is called to a destiny he is not ready for and feels in no way qualified for by the Ruler and Arbitrator of Plaxar, LeZuesez. When LeZuesez drafts him into a civil war breaking out on Plaxar, Roscoe is faced with the life-altering decision to choose between his family or stepping up to the plate to save his embattled planet from ruin and destruction.

When summoned before LeZuesez throne, all the injustice, crime, chaos, dysfunction, addiction, racism, corruption, sex trafficking and inequality are revealed to Roscoe. In addition, his arch enemy, Alonso Gomez, is manufacturing enough deadly poison in his crime lab to kill every inhabitant of Plaxar in order to promote his wicked rise to power.

As hard as the decision is to leave his family, he makes the crucial decision to save the planet. He recruits a team to help him fight in the civil war against evil. Though not easy, they win. As the team returns home to celebrate victory, Roscoe steps on a land mine and his leg is blown to smithereens. He almost dies and is put on life support.

When a group of government officials hears about the success of him and his team, they reveal they have the technology and resources to rebuild his leg. Once Roscoe is rehabilitated, they return home to Plaxar and receive the key to the planet. Plaxar is saved from utter destruction. The only problem with territories is there is always somebody rising up to take over.

The book was written, Chavis said, “with the intended purpose to inspire the slums, the hood and disenfranchised communities all over this hemisphere. It was written to encourage hope, love, perseverance and an unyielding determination to keep pushing ahead, even when it looks like all odds are against you. Roscoe was an average Martian, an unqualified carpenter with a stuttering condition, but when LeZuesez drafted him to a war that would save his planet, he qualified him, due to his humility and willingness to step up to the plate and do what is needed to be done for the sake of all humanity.”
